Here's what's coming up. Here are those who want to work for student interests in the upcoming legislature of StuRa. And there is room for you here too! At the beginning of the new legislature, we would like to introduce you to all members and a few new projects.

The new legislature starts with a completely new board: Johannes Neidel as chairman, Maximilian Schwabe as spokesman, Joleen Schubert and Elisabeth Täschner as first and second financial officer respectively.

Who are we?

It is already Johannes' third legislature in the StuRa, among other things he has experience in the area of finance and university politics. You may also know him as a bartender at the EAC. The student pub and party culture is very important to Johannes. But as chairman, he would also like to have an open ear for teaching concerns and the situation of students due to the corona crisis. In addition, he is looking for possible collaborations with the city of Freiberg. Why all that? Johannes usually replies to-the-point that nobody else does it otherwise.

Also Johannes likes to call Max, deputy and spokesman at his side, "the Sheriff". As such, Max takes care of networking inside and outside the university, among other things. He is also a passionate event organizer in Freiberg. And he did not get started with that just yesterday, instead it is already his second legislature as chairman of FSR 1. Perhaps his commitment to Freiberg is also due to the fact that he grew up in this town, which is also reminiscent of his charming dialect.

Joleen Schubert and Elisabeth Täschner, both in their first legislature in any of the student body councils, have dared to take on the tough and significant responsibility of finances. Making sure that the student budget is shared democratically considering various interests, that our bills are paid on time and that all of this is properly documented, is the daily business of the financial officers. However the two of them are facing further challenges: the digitization of the StuRa finances and keeping in touch closely with all the financial officers of the FSRs and work groups. For the geologist Elisabeth, who also likes to draw, it is particularly important to make financial means and support offered by the StuRa easily accessible and worthwhile for all students.

There have also been three changes to the heads of our departments compared to the previous legislature: We would like to welcome Fabian Kaulfuß as Head of University Politics, Oliver Heymer as Head of Culture and Sports, and Carolin Hupe as Head of Public Relations. When it comes to committees, Fabian has a lot of experience. After a legislature as chairman of the FSR 3, he is also active in the GtB study commission and in the Fakultätsrat of Faculty 3. He is also a member of the Förderverein Himmelfahrt Fundgrube e.V. and the AG Grubenwehr (= mine rescue team). Why? Because it's fun, says music and technology enthusiast Fabian.

But also to achieve something for the students. As part of his university politics department, it is important to him to improve communication between university management and students. One of his projects is also to stimulate the student discussion culture with a series of events on the upcoming Bundestag elections.

Council newbie Oli has huge plans for his Culture and Sports department, too. To organize a varied and memorable freshers' week, to continue the tradition of the interactive advent calendar in the run-up to Christmas, an Ikea tour, another beer pong tournament, barbecue evenings and a lot more. Not only because of his own interests (climbing, making music), he wants to incorporate sport events on campus. Oli gets support in his department from his predecessor Riad Rustum, who was one of the main organizers of the StudiTage in the last legislature, and from FSR 4 member Hannes Klessig, the mastermind behind the successful beer pong tournaments.

Caro took over the head of the department after a few months in StuRa public relations team. Instagram, Facebook, our website and Unirundmail, these are all our media. Caro would like to keep you up to date on current events and controversies - stay tuned! In addition, Caro is still looking for teammates: Can you imagine making memes, designing flyers, administering the website or writing information texts? Come on, your commitment is more than welcome.

A few heads of department are continuing their work from the last legislature: Amy Otto (Equipment), Shubham Sharma (International and Social Affairs) and Iris Cramer (Studies and Education). Amy has even been taking care of the technical support of the StuRa equipment for several years, but has also been a member of FSR 3 and currently represents the students in the Extended Senate and in Fakultätsrat of Faculty 3. In her free time, Amy also deals with IT and with the somewhat more unusual sport of mountain unicycling. Her current plans for the department include to install new PCs in our offices, to tidy up Barbarakeller, to clean up our website and to create guidelines for our IT security. Fortunately, she does not have to face this mountain of tasks alone, but can rely on the help of our youngest StuRa member Quentin Sandhöfner.

Shubham, who is also involved in the AKAS, remains a special address for our internationals. In addition to his open ear for the difficulties of the internationals and the planning of multicultural events, Shubham is also committed to the project of a bicycle workshop and rental station as well as the launch of a semester ticket. He is supported in the international and social department by Jennifer Schwarz, who brings experience from a previous StuRa and a FSR-2 legislature. Jenny also draws her motivation for the committee work from the fact that you are automatically at the center of campus life and get to know a lot of new people.

In the Studies and Education department, Iris will continue to reliably deal with networking with other universities and the challenges of accreditation. Her experience from the FSR 5 and the AG Quality Management will definitely benefit her StuRa work. Furthermore, Iris has made it her business to continue the "StudiTalk: Frust am Montag" introduced by Johannes on Discord. Join this talk without any obligation and let out whatever is bothering you. In her private life, Iris is a hobby-gardener, enjoys going out or playing the violin, in the StuRa she is supported by Dirk Damaschke and his full commitment to teaching. For example, the tutorials currently offered are under Dirk's guidance.

We hope that anyone who has come this far with reading has got a very good insight into the work of the StuRa and also knows all the StuRa members. They are students like you who really want to put work in a colorful campus and opportunities for everyone. You are invited to join their team.
